Croatian Pavilion : Cloud Pergola / The Architecture of Hospitality

MEETINGS IN ARCHITECTURE

Title: THE RAW AND THE SYNTHETIC - or 21st century design ecologies.

Cloud Pergola / The Architecture of Hospitality at the Croatian Pavilion is a collaborative site-specific Environment / Installation crossing the boundaries of Architecture through collaborations in Art, Engineering, Robotic Fabrication, and Computational Models.

We are at a new moment in architecture, when technology not only affects novel physical objects, but also new extensions and cross-collaborations. In recognising the active participation of nonhuman forces in events and understanding that the agency of space spawns beyond human, it propels the need to create a "space of hospitality" for new complicities, new complex ecologies of human and non-human assemblages, algorithms, data structures. In such "landspace" the role of boundaries, either physical or non-physical, is not any more to enclose space, but rather to form tissue for osmotic exchange.

This enriching influence is broadening the range available to architecture of materials, formal values, artistic references and social engagements. As such, provides a new ground for addressing the notion of "design ecology" in the twenty first century.
